First-time User goals :

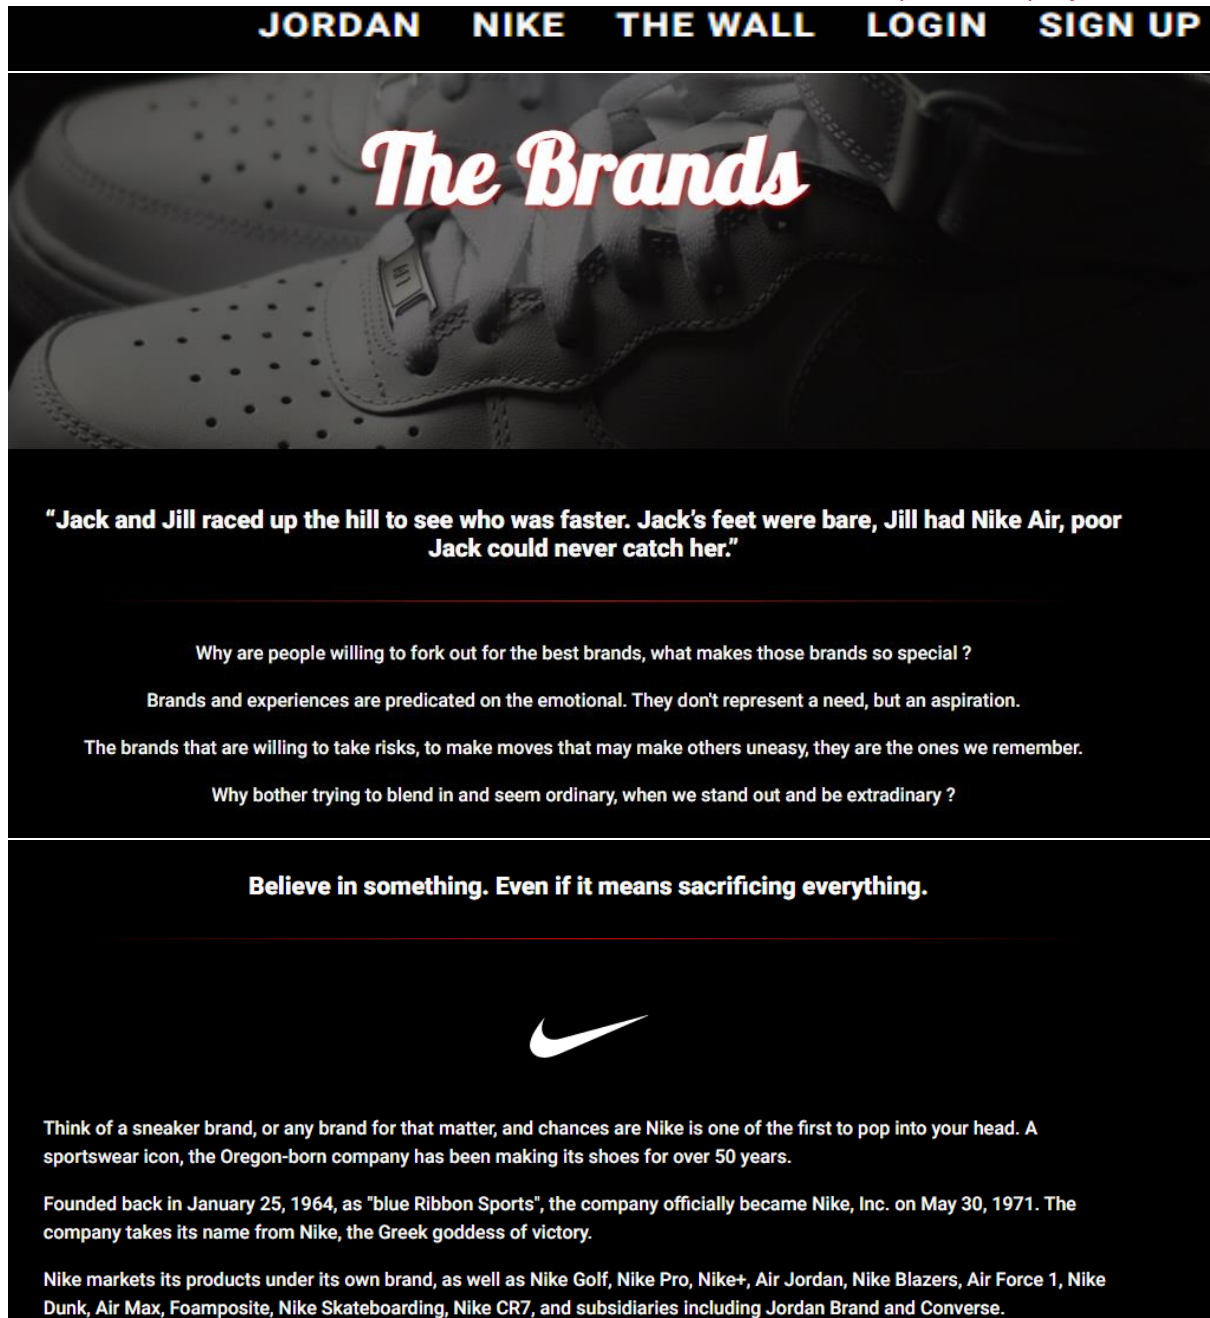

As a first time user, I would like some introduction to the project on the home page.

On the home page, just below the hero-image an introduction is added to introduce the project to the user.

Below the introduction, the main sections (Brand pages and The Wall) are introduced with their own hero images and introductions.

As a first time user, I would like to see some content related to the topic of the project.

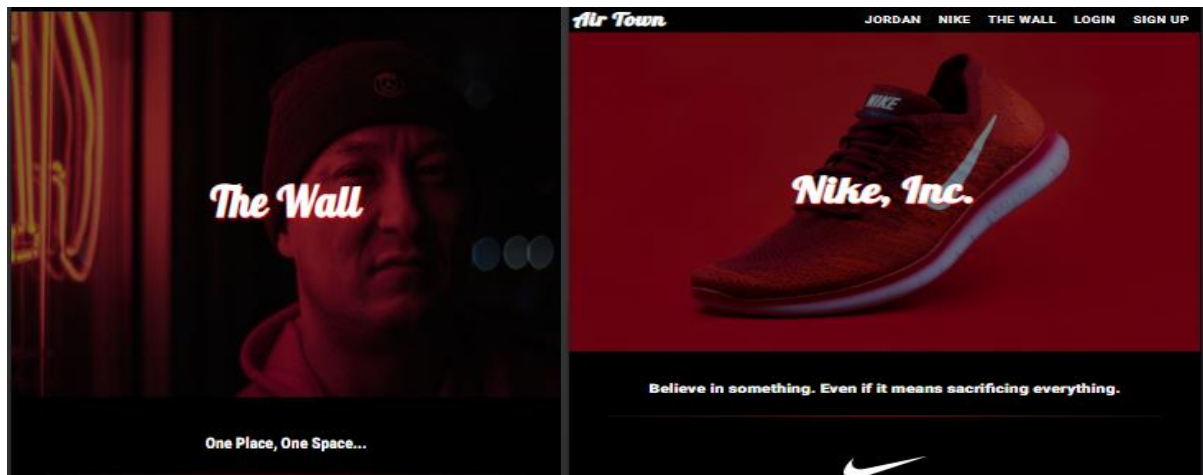

Navbar has links to Jordan and Nike brand pages, providing the user with content and history of the brands.

The Wall is aimed at allowing users to be able to create an account and post about sneakers.

Both Brand and Wall page are introduced to the user on the home page.

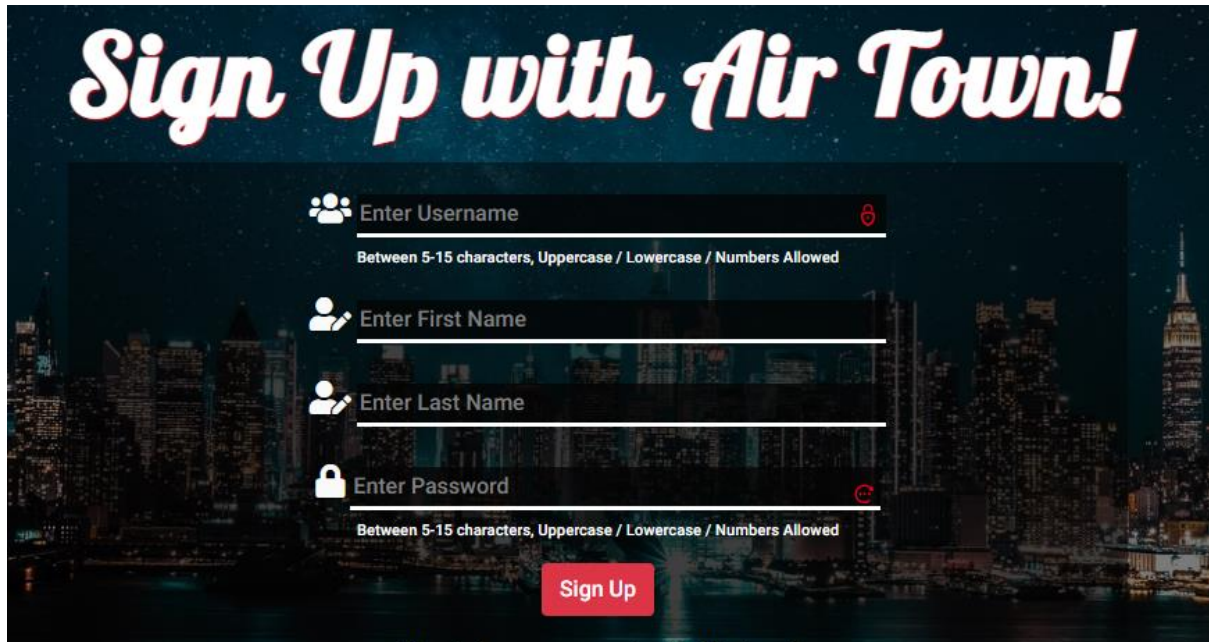

As a first time user, I would like to see a contrast between images/text/color to make pages more appealing.

Constant use of images used through the project, mainly as hero images to provide extra content on pages with less text. Consistent dark theme with black background and gradient overlay over hero images to help text stand out. Black/White/Red are used throughout the project.

Returning User goals :

As a returning user, I would like to be able to sign up and create an account on the website.

Users can use Navbar to head over Signup page to create an account with Air Town. The Sign-up page has 4 input fields that users can fill in to create an account.

Once an account has been created, users will have access to the account page where they can view any posts they have made.

As a returning user, I would like to share my posts and view other posts.

Signed in users will have access to a button allowing them to create a new post. This will redirect them to a page where they can create a post, once they are satisfied, they can select post.

The post will now appear on the wall page, for everyone to see.

As a returning user, I would like to be able to edit my posts, to correct any errors or amend the posts to my liking.

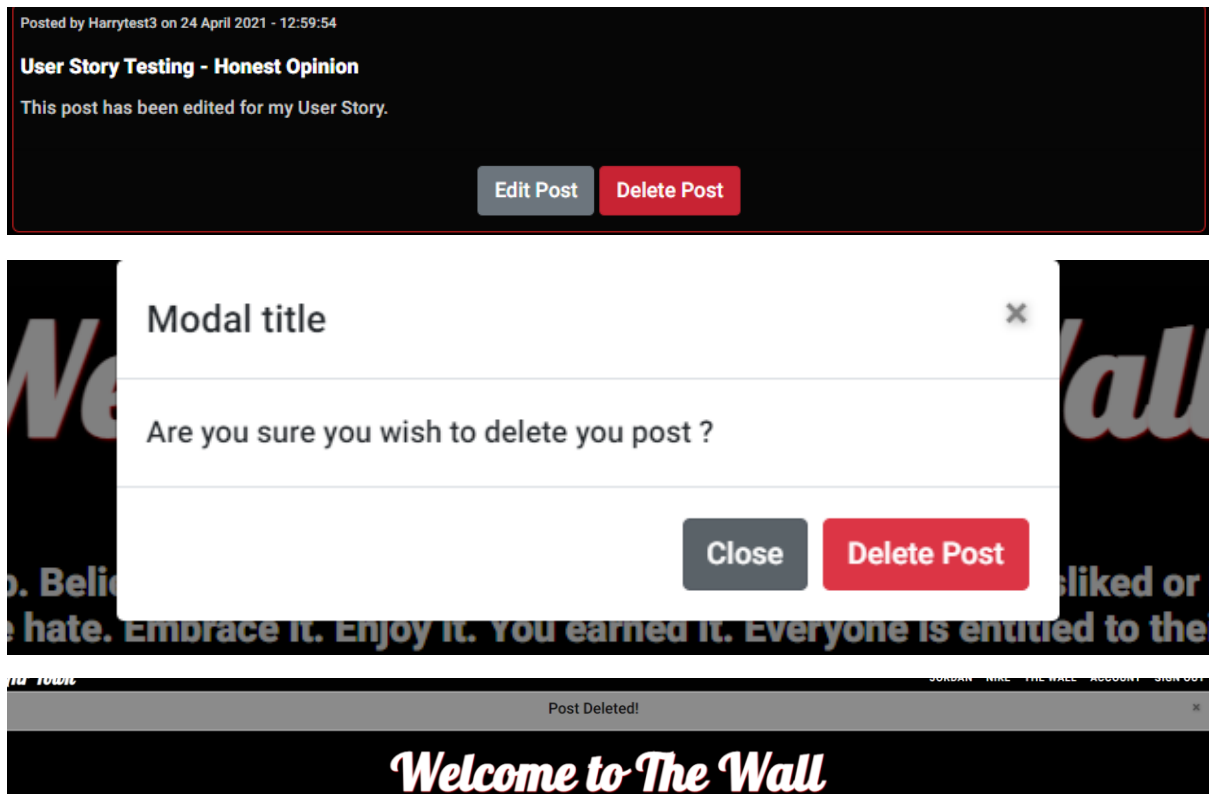

If the signed in user is the same user who has made the post, they will have access to the edit post button.

This will redirect them to the edit post page, where the user can edit their post, change the title or category.

Once the user is satisfied, they can select edit post, which will post the edited post.

As a returning user, I would like to be able to delete my posts, ideally with some form of confirmation to protect me from miss clicks.

To delete a post, the user must be signed in and must be the original author of the post. If all those conditions are met,

Every post made by the user will have a button to delete the post.

Clicking the button will darken the screen and a pop-up modal will appear asking the user if they are sure they wish to delete the post.

Selecting Delete Post a second time will now delete the post from the database, and the user will receive a confirmation at the top of the page.

As a returning user, I would like to be able to search posts, and filter for those that I want.

At the top of the wall page is a user input that allows the user to search for posts via post title or category name.

Users can input text that will query the database and return results based on any matching requests.

Search results are then displayed back to the user.
